

J.S. Bach - Church Cantatas BWV 16

Form: Chorus - Recit (B) - ARIA (B)/CHORUS - Recit (A) - Aria (T) - Chorale. The chorale was added to the libretto later so the 3rd movement was originally the center movement (see side note). The Gospel reading consists of only one verse: "And at the end of eight days, when he was circumcised, he was called Jesus, the name given by the angel before he was conceived in the womb." The cantata's libretto explores the significance of Jesus' name—the expression of a salvation planned from eternity by a triune God, whose love, goodness, and faithfulness call for prayer and trust/faith. (Petzoldt, "Bach Kommentar," vol. 2, p. 299.)

In Bach's third cantata cycle (1725–1727), he set 8 texts by Georg Lehms: BWV 110, 57, 151, 16, 32, 13, 170, 35). See Christoph Wolff, "Johann Sebastian Bach. The Learned Musician," p. 283.

J.S. Bach

Cantata No. 16

Herr Gott, dich loben wir

The tonal plan of this cantata suggests that Bach regarded the first 3 movements (which stress praising God for his goodness and faithfulness in the past) as a cognate unit. Movements 1 & 2 both end on the dominant (G major), leading to C major for the beginning of the following movements. The fourth movement then looks to the future.

In the score, Ob I doubles Vln I; Ob II doubles Vln II (but the movement begins with continuo alone).

Martin Petzoldt argues that the crux of the matter is God's actions from eternity until now, a salvation that is the expression of God's goodness and faithfulness (see "Bach Kommentar," vol. 2, p. 300). Thus, he argues that the theme of the cantata is not just praise and thanks as suggested by Alfred Dürr (see Petzoldt, 299).

Lieb' und Treu' ver-spü-ren! Dein Zi-on sieht voll-komm-ne Ruh', es fällt ihm

The sentence is treated as a question and therefore Bach writes a Phrygian cadence.

J.S. Bach - Church Cantatas BWV 16

Fanfare motive for "the temple resounds..."

Martin Petzoldt notes that the lyrics follow ideas found in Psalm 33:1-3: "Rejoice in the Lord, O you righteous! Praise befits the upright. Praise the Lord with the lyre, make melody to him with the harp of ten strings! Sing to him a new song, play skilfully on the strings, with loud shouts" ("Bach Kommentar," vol. 2, p. 300). See also Ps. 96:1: "O sing to the Lord a new song...."

16/3. Coro ed Aria. •Praise God for blessings that are new each morning (16/3). The "new song" referenced in the preceding movement is now begun immediately (without ritornello). This is a "hybrid movement," in "new" concerted style, combining aria and chorus. It is in free da capo form with the contrasting (middle) section featuring solo bass.

The corno da caccia underscores the festive nature of this movement which is in concerted ("new") style answering the call in the previous movement for a "new song."

For formal design of this movement, see side note.

Bassetto technique (removing continuo support) is often used by Bach to depict something heavenly, unearthly, incomprehensible, or without foundation. Examples include 105/3 (25 July 1723), 46/5 (1 August 1723), 77/1 (22 August 1723), 194/1 (ca. 2 November 1723), 64/5 (27 December 1723), 173/4 (perhaps 29 May 1724), 135/1 (25 June 1724), 133/4 (27 December 1724), 170/3 (28 July 1726), 29/5 (27 August 1731), 11/8 (19 May 1735), also the trio "Denn das Gesetz" in the motet Jesu, meine Freude, BWV 227, and the soprano aria "Aus Liebe" in the St. Matthew Passion.

•Future blessing: Jesus alone shall be our wealth (16/5). Marting Petzoldt argues that this movement is a counterpart to the opening chorus: there the theme was praise and thanks to God the Father in eternity, here it is the soul's riches through Jesus in the here and now. See "Bach Kommentar," vol. 2, p. 302. This da capo aria takes up about half of the cantata's entire duration, indicating that Bach wanted to emphasize this text. The steady, walking bass suggests a settled composure, perhaps prompted by the words "gottvergnügter Geist" (spirit satisfied with God). Bach wrote this cantata at the time he was complaining to the king about being denied some of the duties and the compensation related to the directorship of music at the University Church (letters to the king are dated 14 September, 3 November, and 31 December 1725: see "New Bach Reader," no. 119). The aria probably expresses some of Bach's own feelings at the time.

Obbligato: Oboe da caccia (in a 1731 performance it was replaced with a Violetta). Johann Walther calls it "a violin for the middle part, which can be played either on violas or small violas da gamba." See "Musicalishes Lexicon," p. 637, trans. Unger. This movement is the only example in Bach's cantatas of a violetta being used as a solo substitute. See Karl Hochreither, trans. Unger, "Performance Practice of the Instrumental-Vocal Works of Johann Sebastian Bach," p. 86.

This type of aria is called a "Devisenarie" or "motto aria." After the ritornello, the singer presents the first phrase of the aria as a kind of motto. This is followed by a short instrumental bridge before the aria proper begins. The motto sets the tone (and the literary perspective) for the movement.

Frequent syncopations (and appoggiaturas) as well as the triple meter provide a lilt that reinforces the mood of courtly lightness and joy ("Jesu," "Seelen," "Reichthum," "allein.")

The flourish on "geliebter" gives rhetorical emphasis to that word. It is perhaps an allusion to Jesus' baptism, where the Spirit of God descended like a dove and a heavenly voice said, "This is my beloved Son, with whom I am well pleased." (Matthew 3:17).

Contrasting B Section alludes to Matthew 6:21: "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Though the prayer changes from first person singular to first person plural, the sentiments are still intensely personal.

Perhaps Bach's decision to write a steady, walking bass in this movement was prompted by the image of a composed spirit, one "satisfied in God."

The A Section returns without intervening ritornello because it provides the utterance signaled by the colon. In the libretto's original form, this statement ("Geliebter Jesu...") provides the conclusion to the cantata. See Petzoldt, 303.

Added later to libretto by someone: J. S. Bach? This is the same stanza heard 2 days earlier (30 December 1725, the first Sunday after Christmas) to end Cantata 28, though the harmonization is altered somewhat here. It is the sixth (and last) stanza of "Helft mir Gotts Güte preisen." Evidently, the same sentiments apply for ending one year and beginning the next. As to Bach's personal circumstances at this time, see at 16/5.

•Thanks for blessings in Christ; prayer for new year (16/6). Martin Petzoldt argues that by adding this chorale stanza, Bach broadened the emphasis of the original libretto from a simple expression of praise and thanks for God's goodness and faithfulness as such to one praising God's actions from eternity, the salvation through Christ that is the expression of God's goodness and faithfulness which provides the soul's riches (see especially the second Stollen). See Petzoldt, "Bach Kommentar," vol. 2, p. 303.

Possible allusion to such psalms as Ps. 12:7 and 17:7 ("Wondrously show thy steadfast love, O savior of those who seek refuge from their adversaries at thy right hand"). Petzoldt argues that "Leid" (harm) should not be understood as merely physical. See p. 303.
 Text painting: Although the melodic phrase that contains "Leid" (mm. 9–10) is almost identical (to the previous one (mm. 7–8), Bach harmonizes it differently to color "Leid" with a diminished seventh chord.
