

J.S. Bach - Church Cantatas BWV 80

Chiaistic Form: Chorale Fantasia-Aria/Chorale (B/S)-Recit/Aria (B)-ARIA (S)-Chorale-Recit (T)-Duet (A/T)-Chorale. The chorale by Luther takes its idea of God as refuge from Psalm 46 but does not paraphrase the psalm as a whole. Traditionally, this hymn was associated with Luther's comfort in face of papal opposition. In the 1800s, it became a national song of protest. Already W. F. Bach had added trumpets & timpani.

Cantata No. 80

Ein feste Burg ist unser Gott

The work begins with a choral fantasia of great contrapuntal complexity—in traditional motet technique, proceeding phrase by phrase with instruments doubling voices. Each of the 9 chorale phrases (often altered slightly) is presented fugally, then unembellished by oboes and continuo in canon: Lines 1 & 2 (TASB), mm. 1–31, repeated (SBTA), mm. 32–60; Lines 3 & 4 (TASB), mm. 60–90, repeated (SBTA), mm. 91–119; Line 5 (BTAS), mm. 119–143; Line 6 (ASTB), mm. 143–163; Line 7 (TBAS), mm. 163–180; Line 8 (SATB), mm. 180–199; Line 9 (TBSA), mm. 199–228. It is noteworthy that the order of entries in successive expositions is reversed in chiasmic fashion (e.g., TASB is followed by SBTA). Trumpets and timpani were added by W. F. Bach for a parody work, "Gaudete omnes populi."

NOTE: This piano-vocal edition is based on the Bach Gesellschaft edition, which includes the trumpets and timpani added by W. F. Bach. The NBA full score is based on J. S. Bach's earlier Leipzig version, which does not have those instruments and is notated in alla breve meter, resulting in half as many measures.

Fairly constant 8th-note motion gives the movement homogeneity. This also characterized the opening chorus of the 1729 version. Martin Petzoldt suggests that the 7-voice, fugal texture may symbolize God's all-encompassing creative and sustaining work, while the canons at the end of each imitative section may symbolize that the 6 confessing Christian discipleship ("Nachfolger") allows one to base one's existence in God. See Petzoldt, "Bach Kommentar," vol. 3, 351–52.

80/2. Aria. (Duetto.)

Chorale (tune decorated) sung by soprano/oboe with poetic text sung by bass in aggressive, warlike melismas.

1. (Allegro moderato  $\text{♩} = 80$ )

Chorale (Vs. 2) • Battle led by Christ; victory assured for God's child (80/2)

This movement began the earlier version for the 3rd Sunday of Lent. The vocal part has been expanded here. The text & chorale relate well to Luke 11:21-22, from the original gospel (for 3rd Sunday of Lent), which speaks about the strong man (devil) versus the stronger man (Jesus Christ). See Petzoldt, "Bach Kommentar," vol. 3, 353.

World & Satan rejected; Christ invited into heart (80/4). This is the central movement in a chiastic form, where antithetical elements meet (Jesus enters the heart; Satan & world are driven out). Theologically, the text is based on the concept of mystic union between the believer and Christ. For more about Bach's use of chiastic form, see side note.

The right-hand realization here is editorial.

This type of aria is called a "Devisenarie" or "motto aria." After the ritornello, the singer presents the first phrase of the aria as a kind of motto. This is followed by a short instrumental bridge before the aria proper begins. The motto sets the tone (and the literary perspective) for the movement.

•Victory sure for those holding God in hearts by faith (80/7).

Oboe da caccia and solo Vln in imitation, foreshadowing the imitating duet of Alto & Tenor. This duet structure suggests the relationship between the believer and Christ (the alto voice often represents the believing soul in Bach). See, for example, Petzoldt, "Bach Kommentar," vol. 1, p. 541. On the other hand, with its altered text, the imitative duet structure may also symbolize the duality in the biblical text to which the new lyrics allude (Romans 10:9-10). See more below.

The original text was changed to make the work suitable for Reformation Day (instead of the third Sunday of Lent). Original text: "Wie selig ist der Leib der Jesu dich getragen" (How blessed is the body that bore you, O Jesus). The text was changed to suit the confessional emphasis of Reformation Day. The original text (see above) alluded to the Gospel reading of the original liturgical occasion (3rd Sunday in Lent), in which a woman says to Jesus, "Blessed is the womb that bore you, Jesus." Martin Petzoldt notes that the altered text ("Blessed are those who carry Jesus in their mouths") is a macarism alluding to Romans 10:9-10 ("If you confess with your lips that Jesus is Lord and believe in your heart that God raised him from the dead, you will be saved...."), which allows for the comparative statement that follows ("More blessed are those who bear Jesus in the heart by faith"). He notes that in natural life "bearing" leads to birth and argues that, in the spiritual realm, it is the reverse: spiritual birth leads to "bearing Jesus in the heart." See Petzoldt, "Bach Kommentar," vol 3, 361-62.

Possible biblical allusions here include a passage from the song of Deborah and Barak after their victory over the Canaanite kings: Judges 5:19: "The kings came, they fought...[but] they got no spoils (German: Gewinn....) and Jesus's words in Matthew 10:34: " Then the King will say to those at his right hand, 'Come, O blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world....' " Martin Petzoldt argues that the chorale's last line serves a catechismal function for the cantata as a whole. See Petzoldt, "Bach Kommentar," vol. 3, p. 363.
