

J.S. Bach - Church Cantatas BWV 83

Form: Aria (A) - Aria/Chorale/Recit (B) - Aria (T) - Recit (A) - Chorale.
 The cantata explores the theological implications of Simeon's prayer in the Gospel reading (the Nunc Dimittis), personalizing it (with verbatim quotation as a frame at beginning and end) in no. 2 and closing with a chorale stanza of Martin Luther's paraphrase. See note by Alfred Dürr for more.

In no. 1, "The textual antithesis 'glad time'/'last hour' influences the contrasting compositional structure of the outer and inner sections of this da capo form movement. The principal section is derived from thematic material stated in the introductory ritornello, with its threefold contrast [among] chordal tutti (head-motive), antiphonal motivic treatment, and virtuoso figuration for solo violin." Dürr, 656. See full score for clarity.

15 Alto.

Bach's choice of alto rather than bass is striking. As the traditional "voice of faith," the alto here appropriates the Simeon event (as recounted in the Gospel reading) existentially. See Petzoldt, Bach Kommentar 3:20. More specifically, the alto may represent the prophetess Anna, who joins the holy family and Simeon (see note).

Alfred Dürr writes, "Due to frequent use of vocal insertion, the instrumental music is clearly predominant in this bipartite principal section. The middle section, however, is organized differently. Here, the ritornello themes are heard only in a brief articulating episode [mm. 69–75] and in the following two-bar passage of vocal insertion [mm. 76–77]. Otherwise, largely new, text-engendered themes are developed. In addition, the solo violin has idiomatic bariolage figures, an alternation of stopped and open strings (first on a1, then on d1, and in the second half of the middle section twice in an enhanced form on e2), here without doubt intended as an imitation of tolling bells, indicating death... Both halves of the middle section end with expressive chromaticism. See The Cantatas of J. S. Bach, 656–657.

Dal Segno

Commentators note that this movement is virtually unique in Bach's music.

Ars moriendi ("the art of dying") is a book genre that began after the Black Plague with the anonymous Tractus (or Speculum), artis bene moriendi. Written in the 15th century, it was widely disseminated and translated. A shorter version, which adapts the second chapter, includes eleven woodcuts illustrating 5 temptations of the dying Christian believer and their remedies.

The use of canon suggests inevitability, underscoring the certainty of God's promise in death, as reflected in Simeon's recollection of God's promise that he would not die before he had seen the Savior.

5 Basso

Text painting: The canon theme rises for 6 notes (Mixolydian hexachord), then bounces on a long trilled note before stepping back down, perhaps depicting Simeon's act of taking the baby Jesus up in his arms as well as his heaven-directed prayer of release to death (with a "shiver" at the trill)—the "Nunc Dimittis."

Alfred Dürr writes, "The tenor aria...with its constantly running triplets, is stamped by the image of 'hastening' drawn from the text....The movement is to a large extent pervaded by vocal insertion within the return of extracts of the ritornello played by the instrumental ensemble." See The Cantatas of J. S. Bach, 657.

Da capo Aria • Self-exhortation to pray fervently in care-filled times: paraphrase of Hebrews 4:16. See note. (83/3).

Hebrews 4:14-16. Since then we have a great high priest who has passed through the heavens, Jesus, the Son of God, let us hold fast our confession. For we have not a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weaknesses, but one who in every respect has been tempted as we are, yet without sin. Let us then with confidence draw near to the throne of grace, that we may receive mercy and find grace to help in time of need.

 This type of aria is called a "Devisenarie" (a term coined by Hugo Riemann) or "motto aria." After the ritornello, the singer presents the motto. This is followed by a short instrumental bridge before the aria proper begins. The motto sets the tone (and the literary perspective) for the movement.

Chromaticism and large and/or awkward leaps color the description of approaching death, while more relaxed harmonies depict the comfort of the Savior.

The theme of light was central to the festival of Mary's Purification (called Candlemas because of the custom of celebrating it with lighted candles. (Mary's Purification, Mary's Presentation) on February 2. The name Candlemas originated by the custom, established early in the history of the Christian Church, of celebrating the festival (with its reading of the Nunc Dimittis) with lighted candles.

Text painting: Ascending vocal line for "seeing the Savior's light" as death approaches with a descending chromatic bass for the descent to the grave.

The word "Licht" ("light") acts as a keyword linking the recitative to the final choral stanza. This light is extended to all nations.

(See also 125/6.) •Christ is light for the Gentiles & glory of Israel (83/5). This is the final stanza of 4 in "Mit Fried und Freud ich fahr dahin," the 1524 chorale paraphrase of the Nunc Dimittis by Martin Luther (1483–1546).
