

J.S. Bach - Church

Form: Chorus/Fantasia - Aria (B) - Chorale/Recit (T) - Aria (A) - Chorale/Recit (B) - Aria (T) - Aria (S) - Chorale.
 The structure can be seen as symmetrical with the alto aria (no. 4) forming the center. Bach often used chiasmic (x-shaped/symmetrical) forms, in which center movements (where the mirror image begins) provide the crux of the matter. There antithetical elements meet or are paradoxically inverted (formal inversion reflects an aspect of reversal or turning in the text). In cantata 94, the alto aria acts as the keystone movement, identifying the antithesis between the world and Jesus, which relates to the Gospel reading of the day—Jesus' parable of the dishonest steward who uses worldly wealth to prepare for the future.

(Coro.)

94/1. (Tempo ordinario ♩ = 72.) • World and its treasures rejected in favor of Christ (94/1).

The first movement is like a flute concerto with embedded chorale. In style, it approaches the galant (major key, sparkling transverse flute, slow harmonic rhythm, clear phrase structure, triplets)—a "worldly" style appropriate to the text.

The Ob I/Vln I melody appears related to chorale phrases 1 & 5, implying the conjoined words "Was frag ich einzig mir?" ("What is the one thing I ask myself?").

1. Flute

Ritornello mf The flute theme appears related to chorale phrase 7 ("Thou, thou art my rest").

This type of aria is called a "Devisenarie" (a term coined by Hugo Riemann) or "motto aria." After the ritornello, the singer presents the first phrase of the aria as a kind of motto. This is followed by a short instrumental bridge before the aria proper begins. The motto sets the tone (and the literary perspective) for the movement.

A courtly, minuet-like dance depicts "the world with its "honor, fame, and highly prominent people," as referenced in the chorale text, which is troped with recitatives. It is perhaps a caricatured minuet for "Wollust" ("pleasure"), which is transformed when the text speaks of finding one's pleasure in Jesus. The text is strikingly long.

This is the central (pivot) movement in the cantata's chiastic form, where antithetical elements meet or are paradoxically inverted (formal inversion reflects an aspect of reversal or turning in the text). Here the riches of the world are contrasted with the soul's wealth in Jesus.

The virtuosic flute part suggests Bach had a fine player at his disposal (see note at no. 1).

For peripheral biblical allusions, see note.

In the opening adagio, the alto laments the deluded world, alluding to the "unrighteous mammon" of the Gospel reading. An allegro section describes the contrasting riches to be found in Jesus. The adagio then returns, at first serene but then reprising the lament.

The slithering flute line may represent the snake that "beguiled/deceived" Eve and Adam.

Bourée as "Totentanz"?

F# minor F#7

F# minor (See note.)

With syncopated dance rhythm, written-out ornaments, and patter diction, the soprano continues the previous movement's characterization of the world's hedonism, while claiming a loathsome regard for it.

Bourée as Totentanz? (Compare also BWV 26/4.) Portion of "Totentanz" by Bernt Notke (ca. 1460) in St. Mary's Church, Lübeck (destroyed in 1942 air raid): representatives of all ages and ranks have death as their final destiny.

The choice of oboe d'amore may be related to the reference to "loving Jesus" (m. 20ff.).

3.

B minor B minor B7 E# dim.7 F# minor E# dim.7

Johann Mattheson characterization of F-sharp minor as somewhat "misanthropic" aligns with the idea of interpreting this bourée as a "Totentanz." See note.
